

Marcille Durham, Ingram Group President, is a 25 year veteran of both government and public relations, with experience in both the public and private sectors. First serving the Group as a special projects coordinator and grassroots campaign specialist, Durham went on to establish The Ingram Group's Environmental Practice and represent a wide variety of clients on Tennessee's Capitol Hill. Prior to joining The Group, she served on the staff of former governor and current U.S. Senator Lamar Alexander.

Durham has left her mark on some of Tennessee's major policy and economic development initiatives including the Copper Basin remediation project, Gaylord/Opryland's development and expansion, the Atlanta Olympic Games-Canoe and Kayak event, and Tennessee's energy and conservation policy.

Marcille brings specific expertise to the Group's Nashville and Washington, DC operations, including issue and campaign strategy, message development, community and grassroots organization, and media relations.

Marcille's client experience includes Alcoa, Louisiana Pacific, Gaylord Entertainment, The Atlanta Olympic Games, USDA Forest Service, and Hard Rock Café.
